UKRAINE! I'M COMING!

Plug Me In · 13 September 2016 · 🌐

For a long time it was a close call between the Czech Republic and Ukraine but apparently someone in the Ukraine really wanted me to come over, 103 votes over 42, crazy!

So now I need some more places to stay in Ukraine. If you can offer me a meal, place to sleep and/or energy for the car please select your location on plugmeinproject.com/plug-me-in

See you soon!

The Wohnwagon

The Wohnwagon is an Austrian made off-grid tiny house. It is self-sustaining and produced locally.

For the insulation they use sheep wool, power the house with the sun and recycle the water on the roof.

The mission of this start-up is to show how the future of sustainable living could look like.

DUTCHMAN'S E-CAR EXPLOITS BRING HIM TO THE UAE

Meet Wiebe Wakker, 29, an adventurer like no other

By Sharmila Dhal
CHIEF REPORTER

ABU DHABI Imagine crisscrossing the world in an electric car without any money, your route being determined by anyone willing to provide you with food, shelter and a chance to recharge your vehicle. Far-fetched as the idea may seem, that is what a 29-year-old Dutchman, who is currently passing through the UAE, is doing.
The adventurous Wiebe Wakker, who set out for Australia from the Netherlands on March 15, said he arrived in the UAE from Iran last Tuesday as part of a unique global mission to promote sustainability in daily life and showcase the possibility of covering long distances in e-cars. His blue Volkswagen Golf - with the number plate D-JND-2 - is a 2009 diesel converted into an electric car. Wakker said he travels without money and relies on the support that people offer him on his website plugincarproject.com. "People have been supporting me with a meal, place to sleep or energy for the car. Based upon these offers, I decide on the route of my journey. So I am not driving in a straight line to the land down under but zigzagging my way across the world."

700 offers

Wakker, who is currently putting up with a family in Palm Jumeirah, said he has 10 offers from residents across Dubai and Abu Dhabi. "I have received offers from 700 people across 40 countries, 22 of which I have covered so far, clocking 34,000km over 275 days."

When Wakker left in March from Utrecht in the Netherlands, his followers first sent him to Italy, then via Scandinavia to Russia and from Moscow he started his route down south via the Baltic states, Ukraine, Turkey and Iran. He was overwhelmed by the more than 80 offers he received in Iran. "I must have taken up to 30 of them covering 2,500 km across the country before crossing the desert and reaching the Gulf."

With this, it is believed that he is the first person to have crossed Iran in an electric car.

Wakker said his next stop will be Mumbai, but he cannot go until he gets the support to ship his car. "I am trying to find someone who can arrange the transportation."

He said he is not sure how the journey will eventually develop but plans to make the most of his stay in the UAE. "When I left in March I could never have imagined that I would end up in this country. That I made it this far with an electric car feels good and I don't give up easily. Since I will be here for a while, I plan to take part in the Global Electric Vehicle Road Trip that takes place at the end of January. The emirates-wide event promotes sustainable mobility, one of my key goals."

“When I started out from the Netherlands, I could never have imagined I would end up in the UAE. That I have made it this far with an electric car feels good.”

Sarawak Energy, Wiebe Wakker team up to showcase sustainable mobility

BY ALEXANDRA LORNA

KUCHING: Sarawak Energy has partnered with Wiebe Wakker from the Plug Me In project to showcase sustainable mobility through electric vehicles (EV).

Sarawak Energy was first to introduce e-mobility to its fleet in 2014 as an initiative towards sustainability. The partnership is in an effort to increase the awareness and usage of green vehicles in this part of the world.

Wakker drove his EV from Netherlands across the globe towards his final destination in Australia.

He arrived in Sarawak earlier this week, having shipped his car from Port Klang to Kota Kinabalu and making the journey west-bound from there.

Wakker attended a sharing ses-take proactive steps to reduce the carbon footprint and to move towards energy efficient vehicles in order to promote sustainability.

"Sarawak is an ideal place to use electrical vehicles. Electricity supply in Sarawak is predominantly provided from hydropower, which is renewable, reliable and affordable," she pointed out.

Wakker, who is from the Netherlands, embarked on a solo journey in an EV from his home country March 2016. Largely crowd-sourced, his journey has so far spanned almost 30 countries, covering over 50,000km.

The intrepid traveller also works part-time to meet his costs, and relies on the generosity of his social media followers along the route for accommodation and electricity to charge his car.
